Community Emergency Response Training (CERT)

The Thornton Office of Emergency Management is offering CERT Training to all community members over the age of 18.

Community Emergency Response Training (CERT) is a national program that educates communities about natural and man-made hazards to prepare residents, government agencies, and private/non-profit organizations to enhance response capability and resiliency to recover after a local emergency or disaster.

Thornton CERT Training is 21-hours of hands-on training and exercise that prepares our whole community for an emergency or disaster.

You'll learn skills in team-building, disaster preparedness, fire safety, medical response, psychology, and light search and rescue.

The training will culminate in a full-scale disaster exercise where you can put your newly acquired skills to work.

To graduate and receive a certificate, you must complete all five days of training and participate in the exercise. Any classes missed can be taken at a later date or with another CERT Program in the Denver Area.

Upon completion you'll receive a certificate and (if available) a CERT back-pack with supplies to get you started on your emergency kit.
