

Andropogon gerardii      Big Bluestem

This grass is also called Turkey Feet due to the resemblance of the birds foot . It looks great in any setting, especially natural landscapes. The native prairie grass was a very important food source for the American Bison before they were eliminated by western settlers. The stems are flat and have a bluish hue at the base of the plant. Very drought tolerant, plant in well draining soil, full sun. Tolerates a wide variety of conditions from moderate to dry. Leave the attractive foliage over winter, then cut down to 4-6" in the spring.

Height 3'-4' Spread 15"-20"

USDA Zones: 4-9

